where futures matter

You're wide awake to the challenges the world is facing. You want your life to be as fulfilling as possible, whilst contributing to a brighter future for the planet and its inhabitants.

To help you achieve your objectives, or to identify them and give them clarity and focus, you need a University as dedicated to the future as you are. A welcoming place where quality, diversity and inclusivity are embraced, where you're challenged to be the best you can be. An environment which encourages people to come together to make the world a better place. You'll find all that and more at the University of Winchester – the University for Sustainability and Social Justice.

Making a difference in the world is key to what we do here at Winchester. We know the future of our world matters to you too.

We all need to take action now to combat the global climate crisis. We've aligned our Strategic Vision 2020-2030 with the United Nations' Sustainable Development Goals and our Climate Change Education Strategy means you will graduate with an understanding of how climate change is relevant to your subject area and your everyday life.

our global community

Winchester is a great place for international students to live and study. You will encounter new friends, cultures, and interests here that will give you a broader world view and help equip you for future challenges. We are proud to be an international University, with students and staff from around 80 different countries worldwide. As a community, we deeply value each individual – whatever your nationality, ethnicity, beliefs, or orientation, you will be welcome and cherished here.

APPLYING TO US

The International Team can advise you on all aspects of making a successful application to study at the University. We are here to help, from making the application itself, to advice for those who will need a student visa.

A WARM WELCOME

We meet international students flying into the UK and shuttle you from airport to campus by coach for our Welcome Week. There's also an Orientation Programme before your studies begin to help you settle in and meet other students.

Our Student Services Team are here to provide you with advice and support on issues such as health, welfare, employment, finances and study skills throughout your time with us.

FUNDING

We offer a range of international scholarships. Find out more at winchester.ac.uk/studentsandmoney

ENGLISH LANGUAGE SUPPORT

We require all international undergraduate applicants to have a minimum of IELTS 6.0 (including 5.5 in academic writing) or equivalent. There are some courses which require higher IELTS and this will be clearly indicated in their entry requirements. We offer foundation and short pre-sessional programmes to improve your English language skills prior to your chosen undergraduate studies, as well as in-sessional support alongside your main course of study. You can find out more at winchester.ac.uk/eltsu

Scan the QR code or visit winchester.ac.uk/courses for more information about our American Studies courses including full entry requirements, tuition fees and modules. Please see full course listing on pages 97-100.

The United States of America is arguably the wealthiest, most powerful, culturally influential and diverse nation in the world, but it's also one of the most complex and contradictory societies.

Whether you're interested in how the political system works, exploring African-American cultural heritage, or enriching your love of American films and literature, these courses have it covered. The awesome breadth and depth of American culture and history are reflected in our extensive courses, which give you the opportunity to study the areas that excite you most.

Explore key issues and debates about culture, race and gender which have shaped the United States and, if you prefer, follow a specialist route in politics, literature, film or history.

Expand your horizons by studying at one of our excellent partner universities in America for a semester or a year. Our optional field trip in Year 2 or Civil Rights Pilgrimage to the American South in Year 3 make for gripping shorter visits.

You will gain the knowledge to understand and evaluate the cross-cultural diversity of the United States, and skills of analysis, debate and presentation that will contribute significantly to your employment prospects.

Students from American Studies courses have gone on to have careers in the public, private and not-for-profit sectors.

Scan the QR code or visit winchester.ac.uk/courses for more information about our Animal Welfare course including full entry requirements, tuition fees and modules. Please see full course listing on pages 97-100.

Positively contribute to the advancement of animal welfare and bring about a better world.

One of the University's core values is Compassion – for people, animals and the planet. Our Animal Welfare and Society course encourages you to explore relationships between humans and other animals, and examine what animal welfare means today. The broad scope and thought-provoking content enables you to discover and develop your areas of interest.

You will investigate critical questions such as what are our responsibilities to animals; why do we develop emotional attachments to animals; why does society make gods of some animals but vilify others; and what can we learn about human nature by studying animals?

Critically review major theories, philosophies and contemporary problems as you study a range of animal welfare issues through disciplines from ethics and law, to policy and the environment, to animal advocacy and representation.

Through internships and other work placement opportunities you will be able to experience working with animals and/or organisations associated with animal issues.

Students on this course have used it to kick-start careers in diverse areas.

If you enjoy delving into the bare bones of what it means to be human, then anthropology at Winchester is ideal for you.

Through the lens of social anthropology, biological anthropology and archaeology/material culture, you will embark on a fascinating exploration of human behaviours and societies across the past and present. Modules draw on archaeological evidence, the long-term perspective of human evolution and present-day examples from societies around the world.

You can get up close and hands-on with a range of materials, from primate skeletons to religious relics in our cutting-edge departmental laboratory. You also have the opportunity to undertake a work placement in Year 3 and participate in rewarding field research locally or further afield with academics working in locations like Barbados, Georgia or other established projects worldwide.

As an anthropology student, you learn how to understand, interpret and respond to human behaviour.

These courses will develop your intercultural understanding which is a key asset in today's international job market. Our graduates work in a wide range of careers such as international development, government and business.

Where the ancient, classical and medieval past gives you a keen lens through which to see our modern world.

Gain a critical yet empathetic perspective of different views and develop deep theoretical and cultural knowledge sought after by employers in many industries.

Our Ancient, Classical and Medieval Studies course takes you on an engaging adventure through time. From the Bronze Age to the Crusades and beyond, it's an absorbing journey exploring the archaeology, history, art and religion of human settlements in the British Isles, Europe, the Mediterranean and the Atlantic. This course has a multidisciplinary approach to the human past, led by expert faculty from archaeology and history.

Meanwhile, our Classical Studies course delves specifically into the rich heritage of the ancient Greek and Roman worlds. Explore fascinating cultural and intellectual history on this course which blends together the study of history, literature, drama, philosophy, archaeology, art and architecture. The course contextualises and enriches the study of these disciplines through theoretical, research and vocational elements. You investigate the world of the Greeks and the Romans in both historical and contemporary contexts and so come to a new understanding of the world.

Both courses also offer opportunities for placements, trips or study abroad.

Scan the QR code or visit winchester.ac.uk/courses for more information about our Creative Writing courses including full entry requirements, tuition fees and modules. Please see full course listing on pages 97-100.

We want you to become the best writer you can be. Our passionate and supportive lecturers run workshops designed to encourage you to develop your own individual writing style.

You are guided through a series of structured writing assignments and exercises designed to equip you across a diversity of literary forms and styles. Focus on the practice of crafting written prose, poetry and script is facilitated through dynamic workshops and discussions led by tutors who are published authors. If you like, you can study creative writing alongside professional writing, drama or English literature.

You can find further inspiration from the authors, publishers and agents you will meet – either as guest speakers on your course or via the Winchester Reading Series.

Our courses equip you with some fantastic transferable skills, such as critical thinking and articulate expression, which are valued in a variety of employment contexts.

Creative and Professional Writing scored 100% for student satisfaction and Creative Writing ranked in the top 10 for overall student satisfaction in the National Student Survey 2019.

If you're seeking an intellectually challenging discipline that could combine modern economics with finance and banking, then our suite of courses are ideal – even if you haven't studied economics before.

From global recessions to interest rates, the news is full of stories where economics and finance matter. Explore economic systems and how they work and gain an in-depth understanding of their impact on society and the way we live.

Economists are in demand and highly valued by businesses, so we ensure you develop the technical skills – such as proficiency in quantitative data analysis – and confidence to operate successfully in a global work environment.

The practical application of economic principles and theory is at the heart of our courses. You will benefit from a thorough grounding in economic theory focused on the core areas of macroeconomics, microeconomics and applied economics.

Depending on your chosen pathway, you can study management accounting, financial management, behavioural finance, investments, risk management, banking and financial markets, international banking, and financial economics.

You will also engage with developments in data and digital from a technical and critical perspective.

Where words matter.

Join a community passionate about the study of literature and the broad subject of English in all its rich diversity and quirkiness.

Our wide range of English courses are designed to spark your imagination, sharpen your written communication skills and encourage you to think critically and creatively about this global language.

You can explore the depth of English literature, from Chaucer to rap poetry; examine the roots of the English language and the forces that have shaped it over time; or take a more scientific approach to its linguistic composition.

You can broaden your perspective by choosing to study a course combining English with another subject like drama, education studies, film and more.

Meet authors, publishers and agents as guest speakers on your course or via the Winchester Reading Series. Most of our courses offer field trips, work experience or study abroad opportunities so you can broaden your perspective and help shape your future.

View the world in a whole new light when you embark on our dynamic, accredited geography degree.

Using an integrated human and physical geography perspective, you examine some of the most pressing issues facing the planet in the twenty-first century.

From local challenges to global issues such as population growth, resource shortages, geopolitical instability and climate change – there's a whole world to explore. In doing so, you learn how the natural world interacts with today's changing society and how we might plan for the future.

Many modules take you out of lectures into the field. Locally, recent destinations have included nearby National Parks and Wales. There are also opportunities to take a field module in Europe and also gain another perspective by studying in America or Canada for a semester.

Our course recognises the value of geography to society and emphasises the importance of communicating this effectively to diverse audiences.

This combination of solid subject knowledge and awareness of impact produces well rounded, confident geographers ready to enter a variety of growing areas of employment in government, science and industry.

Scan the QR code or visit winchester.ac.uk/courses for more information about our Liberal Arts courses including full entry requirements, tuition fees and modules. Please see full course listing on pages 97-100.

Where big ideas matter.

Liberal Arts offers philosophical study across humanities, social and natural sciences, and arts.

The challenge we set for you is to work across these areas in an integrated way, to make sense of the world we live in. You will read, reflect on and discuss many of the most important texts and ideas in the Western tradition, and beyond. You can discuss, debate and challenge your own thinking in spoken and written work.

Liberal Arts is ideal if you want to expand your knowledge, thinking, and understanding beyond single academic disciplines. It is a different kind of degree and it is not a new degree. It is the oldest form of higher education in the Western tradition. In many ways it is where the idea of higher education began. Liberal Arts isn't afraid to ask the big questions and to encourage its students to explore their own answers.

As one of only a few UK universities to offer Liberal Arts, we are committed to becoming a seat of excellence for liberal education, where you can gain a vast array of skills which are transferable to an equally wide range of industries.

Are you looking to learn from history's smartest thinkers? Our open-minded and analytical courses engage with the big questions of human existence, the role of religion and the importance of peacebuilding.

Depending on your interests, you can explore some of the most current and critical issues in today's globalised world through the examination of theological and philosophical arguments, ancient texts, living religions, religious diversity and ethical controversies.

Focus on values and beliefs to deepen your understanding of the specific needs of individuals and communities within local and global societies.

Learn from history's smartest thinkers to analyse the profound questions at the heart of religion, philosophy and ethics from multiple perspectives.

Alternatively, you can build a greater understanding of developmental issues, religious conflict and peacebuilding.

As you develop skills in critical argument and cultural literacy, you will grow as a writer, debater and thinker.

You are welcome to join regular film screenings and discussions hosted by our active student-led Philosophy Society and attend departmental talks and seminars by major international thinkers.
